In This Chapter Choose from high-end cameras Pick the best lenses Step into digital photography Organize and edit Introducing filters and other creative effects Digital photography is about a lot more than using a camera and snapping some photos. It takes expertise to capture images that give you the photo results you want. But the key to good photos is preparation, preparation, and more preparation. A great digital camera is not a magic wand that makes ordinary photos turn into great art. The way you use the camera doesn't matter if the camera is anything but a still camera. Do not settle for less than a great camera for the shots you take. It's worth spending time and money on a camera that gives the greatest chance of capturing the image you want with the least amount of hassle. Some good cameras start in the $600 price range, but others are rather pricy. You also need to consider the number and quality of photo effects that you want. In this chapter, you discover the types of cameras and lenses that are available to you, as well as how to decide which one best fits your needs. Then you see how to choose and use a good tripod to steady your camera. You also find out how to capture and edit your images. ## First Things First: Choosing a Camera Digital cameras range from $50 to hundreds of dollars. Higher-end cameras feature more features and are more capable, as well as taking better images. You can spend a small fortune on a camera that has features that your first camera doesn't have. A few high-end cameras can cost thousands of dollars, but you can buy the best-selling ones for about $250. In this book, we use the term "digital camera" to refer to a camera that captures images in a digital format; the traditional photo film was replaced by digital cameras. Despite the fact that most digital cameras also have an ability to capture conventional or film images

Q: How to create a matrix of images in MATLAB I am trying to create a matrix of image elements in MATLAB. I would like each element of the matrix to be one specific image. I would like to be able to specify the name of the image file each time it is run. A pointer to a previous post may be helpful, but I am not able to find anything about image elements in a matrix. A: Think simple. You can get a list of filenames you have, for example: files = dir('some/dir'); Now you just need to create the Matrix: imgs = zeros(size(files,1)); for ii = 1:length(files) imgs(ii,:) = imread(fullfile(files(ii),files(ii).name)); end The organisers of the football World Cup have unveiled the opening ceremony for the tournament, which will be held in Brazil from June 12 to July 13. Brazil's culture minister, Simone de Oliveira Soares, said the ceremony will reflect the cultural heritage of the South American country, and will feature indigenous people, musicians and artists. "Brazil has so many contributions to the World Cup. People from all over the world will come, and we want to show them what Brazil is all about," said Soares. The ceremony will include a theatre performance, street shows, rock band performances, film screenings, a cultural fair and the arrival of an acrobatic team, the Brazilian Air Force Regiment. It will start at 22:00 local time on the opening day - when the Portugal

What's New In?

Get ready for the power of microfinance With millions of unbanked people living on less than $1 a day and the great majority of them women, it's little wonder that microfinance organisations have been trying to help more than ever before. Governments and the private sector have responded in different ways, with the majority of existing funding focusing on agriculture-based loans in the developing world, most notably in India, or microfinance for women (of which there are several types). But microfinance is under threat from different sources. The first is the advance of technology. Personal digital wallets are becoming the norm, and it's not just consumers who want to be able to access their money and make payments via their phone. Mobile money apps can help customers in many parts of the world, but they are not universal. Digitization also creates new risks, such as digital theft, and is creating conflicts over how transactions should be dealt with. But there is another more powerful force at work. Over the last ten years or so, big banks have become increasingly wary of small businesses and have focused more and more of their money and their staff on lending to large corporations. Their fear has been that they will lose business to start-ups, and it's true that microfinance organisations often offer cheaper terms to start-ups with greater growth potential. So if big banks stop lending to smaller firms, a lot of small firms will suddenly find themselves with less cash, and they will need to find somewhere else to borrow money. It is exactly this point that the technology of the emerging world – in particular, smartphones, and mobile money – offers the banks. It's becoming very difficult to get a loan from a big bank or a credit union, but through the emerging world, getting a smartphone is becoming very easy. Even more importantly, without a smartphone, it is very difficult to pay a bank on time – the Indians call it 'kanun' – unless you have a lot of money in your bank account. So if people can get phone credit, they will just be more likely to pay their banks on time, and be less tempted by payday loans. If some people are able to get their smartphones paid for by their banks, this will reduce the risks for other people. As the old saying goes, a rising tide lifts all boats – but not just all boats in a good mood. For instance, in the big cities of the developing world
