"Iran's weapons of mass destruction are a red line for us," said Ahmadinejad, referring to the threat to Tehran by Washington's "maximum pressure" campaign that included banning Iranian airline traffic and closing off diplomatic contacts. "We don't think we need to be subject to such ultimatums," Ahmadinejad said at a news conference in Tehran, where he was quoted by state news agency IRNA. Ahmadinejad's comments come as the Iranian Foreign Ministry expressed its "full support" for a nuclear deal struck between Tehran and six world powers in April, amid ongoing concerns that Iran could break a UN Security Council resolution and resume its sensitive atomic work. "The country's atomic programme is the red line and we don't think we need to be subject to such threats," Ahmadinejad said. "This is because we've never interfered in others' affairs." Iran is not party to the six-nation nuclear deal, which saw the P5+1 group, made up of the United States, China, France, Britain, Russia and Germany, strike an agreement with Iran on its disputed atomic programme in exchange for a gradual lifting of economic sanctions. Washington has insisted that it will continue to exert pressure on Tehran in the hope of forcing a change in policy and reversing Tehran's nuclear ambitions, but the White House has stopped short of saying that Iran is on the "verge" of possessing a nuclear weapon. On the issue of nuclear sanctions, Ahmadinejad said Iran was willing to negotiate with the P5+1 about their removal, but not with the "Zionist regime" of Israel. "Zionist regime" was a reference to Israel, a term many of Ahmadinejad's supporters use to refer to the country's Jewish population. Ahmadinejad is often accused by Western officials and media outlets of a radical, anti-Israel ideology, which he denies.. 0 5 a1d647c40b
