The goal of this research is to develop a specific and sensitive assay for the anti-hepatitis B virus (HBV) activity of interferon. The specific aims of the proposal are to (1) develop assay methods for the direct measurement of interferon in human sera, (2) evaluate the direct method for interferon measurement in human sera, and (3) evaluate the direct method for the measurement of interferon in cell culture supernatants. Phase 1 will begin with the cloning of interferon-alpha, -beta, and -gamma receptors into a mammalian expression vector. The receptors will be co-expressed in mammalian cell lines using the c-fos oncogene as a selectable marker to develop cell lines capable of expressing a high concentration of the human interferon alpha/beta/gamma receptors. Interferon receptors will be purified from the mammalian cell lines, and the amount of interferon produced by the cell lines will be quantified using an enzyme-linked immunosorbent assay. Transfected cell lines expressing receptors and non-transfected cells will be used to measure the concentration of interferon produced by both cells in culture. The direct assay for the measurement of interferon will be validated using the recombinant and human cells lines, and the ability of the assay to detect anti-HBV activity of interferon will be evaluated. The assay for the measurement of interferon will be developed into a sensitive sensitive assay, and this method will be used to measure the anti-HBV activity of interferon both in human sera and
