Evergree's guitarist, Mike Milligan, has revealed the influential gothic rock band's involvement in the creation of the original
'The Muppet Christmas Carol' score. The original score for the Charles Dickens adaptation was composed by Henry Mancini, but the Muppets' producers commissioned Nick Castle to produce a new score for the "Muppet Christmas Carol" which would be performed along with the Muppet songs in the film. Castle's co-composer on this special project was British singer/songwriter Ian Broudie. Mike Milligan has told the Liverpool ECHO that Castle and Broudie worked closely together and he didn't necessarily have to go into the studio and add his own ideas to the songs of Castle and Broudie. He explained: "A lot of times, a lot of people never know what goes on behind the scenes. As a writer and as a songwriter, I've come to find that you don't know when something is creative or when it is not. "We would go in, we'd make a couple of sessions and then I would record the guitar tracks. I wouldn't necessarily do anything that was completely different to what Ian had already done. "I would make a couple of suggestions, always trying to keep it as close to what Ian had done as possible. I'd help in anyway that I could.
"It's easy to be creative in a recording session. You're never limited. You can do whatever. But in a 'What if' situation, you might have to be more creative. "You're playing it straight on but you don't necessarily have to play it as the song is written. "A lot of
