The controls are joystick/gamepad only. HPI does not support input from the actual controller (ie. button and analog stick) in that you can not move a cursor on the screen while in game. Connecticut has joined the ranks of the already full-fledged pet insurance market, with the state's first pet health insurance policy going into effect. "Today is a monumental day for the pet care industry and pet owners," said State Treasurer Denise L. Nappier in a press release. "The launch of pet health insurance is another step in the right direction as consumers in Connecticut begin the process of planning for and protecting their pet's health and well-being." The pet health insurance policy -- available only to Connecticut residents who are licensed pet owners -- works by taking a percentage of a policyholder's annual veterinary bill. With the launch of the pet insurance policy, Hartford HealthCare said it would start charging an annual $50 membership fee. "We are excited to launch this new pet health insurance policy for owners in Connecticut," said Kyle Obler, pet insurance director at Hartford HealthCare. "It makes good financial sense to prevent expensive emergencies from ever occurring in the first place." The insurance will initially cover 80 percent of veterinary services, including annual examinations, vaccinations, surgeries, and medicines. The pet health insurance will also be available for owners who already have a veterinary health plan from another insurer. There are approximately 800,000 dogs in Connecticut, according to the American Veterinary Medical Association. Of those, about 5 percent are purebred dogs and about 80 percent are owned by families, according to the pet insurance policy. Connecticut joins the pet insurance market in Massachusetts, Hawaii, Minnesota, and New Jersey. "The Hartford Pet Insurance program is a compelling value for Connecticut residents and businesses, and it's the first in the state," said state Rep. Kathi-Anne Reinstein, who is chairing a legislative committee to further develop Connecticut's pet insurance regulations. "It is an exciting opportunity for Connecticut's pet insurance consumers to experience the right coverage at the right price
