What's new in ECO HOLE:

. They show no mercy, let not their power be questioned, let not their will ever be thwarted. Precision Kollat cut the arm from its socket with a single, wily blow from a few feet away from the victim. The body fell like a lifeless doll to the floor. The elaborate knots and cross-stitch embroidery the body of the arms snapped like candy doused in water. The severed limbs joined by a horrifying stretch of twitching meat and exposed bone, bared, screaming, for the world to see. It was an agony to behold, and more than these two could bear. "Do you remember a time where you were nothing?" Slayer Two took the tendons and pulled them apart, and the jagged, shredded tissues joined again. "You were nothing," he continued. "No, nothing!" Sin gasped. As Slayer Two separated them once more, Sin's gaze locked with mine. His eyes were five times as wide as normal. And their amber did not contain despair, this time; they held terror and a tremble, and Sin would not
