Tresa Baldas Detroit Free Press A 59-year-old man is behind bars on a charge of indecent exposure after he appeared to use a sex toy to masturbate in front of a 7-year-old girl in a Michigan City home. A police report said the girl told officers that her mother's ex-boyfriend walked into the bedroom and exposed himself to her and said he was "going to do it again." The woman's current boyfriend was asleep in the bedroom when the man entered, the report said. Fort Wayne authorities made the arrest April 27 after the victim's mother called police, according to a news release from Fort Wayne Police. The accused was not at the scene, but police have identified him as Keith Sylvester Spilsbury, 59, of Michigan City, the release said. The release said the man is being held in the Allen County Jail on $5,000 cash bail. Sexual misconduct allegations: Harvey Weinstein's ouster triggers probe The release said police were called about 5:30 p.m. to the woman's home, on the 3400 block of Delaware Avenue, after the victim's mother said a male came into her bedroom, grabbed her and said "You are going to have to watch," and then exposed himself to her. The woman told police she pushed her mother's ex-boyfriend out of the bedroom and then heard him say: "I'll come back again. I'm going to do it again." No other information about the woman's ex-boyfriend was provided in the police report. Home and Away (song) "Home and Away" is a song by The Fratellis and the fourth track off of their fifth studio album, Let Forever Be. It was released on June 23, 2011 as the album's first single and the band's first single not to be released as a download. It was the band's first mainstream single after "Like Clockwork". A video was produced for the single. It received mixed reviews, with many critics praising the upbeat rhythm and the song's positive message. The song was also featured in the 2013 movie Snow White and the Huntsman. Background and writing According to lead singer Julian Hamilton, the song originated when he and lead guitarist Dave Fridmann were writing in their car while on tour in Australia. Hamilton originally intended for the song to feature some sort of build up and falsetto chorus. The building melodies were scrapped later in the process, and the "clean" sound they wanted to achieve was finally used. All three members felt that the single was a strong break from the rest of the album, and so they decided to release it separately. "Home and Away" has been described as the song that best "captures the infectious spirit of The Fratellis and the infectious energy of their fans." Music video The video was directed by Zach Lipovsky. It shows the band playing in a desert. The video was uploaded to YouTube on June 22, 2011, and rose to number one on the UK Singles Chart. It also entered the top 10 on the Billboard Alternative Songs chart. Critical reception The song received very positive reviews. Sam Sutherland of A Song A Day called the song "an exciting introduction to The Fratellis' new album Let Forever Be." Gigwise compared it to The Fratellis' previous hit "Like Clockwork" and said that it "sounds effortless and young." Jon O'Brien of AllMusic said that the song "is more attention-grabbing and gripping than Let Forever Be's prevailing single." Music video The music video was directed by Zach Lipovsky. It shows the band playing in a desert. The video was uploaded to YouTube on June 22, 2011, and rose to number one on the UK Singles Chart. It also entered the top 10 on the Billboard Alternative Songs chart. Chart performance The song debuted at number seven on the Billboard Hot 100, and has so far climbed to number two
