This new Add-On brings the Class 74/9 trains back to the Total War Inimitable Game Train Simulator series. The Dash-9, or Class 94 in common parlance, are very important in many parts of the world, especially the American West and Canadian prairies. The BNSF class of locos was the first locos produced by the Baldwin Locomotive Works, and they were very successful. There was a time when the BNSF class of locomotives was among the highest grossing locos in the US freight locomotive class. Just after World War Two the BNSF Railroad overhauled the locomotives, replacing the 2nd and 3rd class cab control. The Dash-9 is a dual-cab locomotive with the diesel locomotive in the rear cab. The cab controls are simple levers which the driver can use to control both the engine and the train. The BNSF class of locomotives is very successful in freight duties in the United States. The BNSF class was the first to be issued 'Delta' shaped bogies (standard axle boxes), which would remain standard for the entire class. About The Game Train Simulator: Hong Kong Tram Add-On: The Hong Kong Tram add-on brings the Hong Kong tramways back to the Total War Inimitable Game Train Simulator. The Hong Kong tramways have an extremely rich history stretching back to the first series of trams built in 1885. The Hong Kong tramways are very well known for their trolley buses and underground mass trams and are a popular tourist destination as well as a major public transport service. The Hong Kong Tram Add-on brings the Hong Kong tramways back to the Total War Inimitable Game Train Simulator. About The Game Train Simulator: LNWR G class Locomotives Add-On: This new Add-On brings the LNWR G class locos back to the Total War Inimitable Game Train Simulator series. The G class or LNER class of locomotives were produced from 1939 to 1952. Their success was such that they remained in service until 1968/1969. The LNER class of locomotives are one of the most complex and versatile British locomotive classes built. They can be used in all types of duties from freight to passenger work and mixed traffic. Because of their versatility, they remain in service with many operators today.

If My Heart Had Wings -Flight Diary-

For some reason Steam takes forever to list my controllers (a Logitech RumblePad2). Normally it takes about 5-10 seconds. Any idea why it would take on Steam but more like 5 minutes on my steam account page. Alyssa wrote:For some reason Steam takes forever to list my controllers (a Logitech RumblePad2). Same for me, I only had 50 more seconds before I got an error message that said something about my accounts IDs and passwords being different. Really annoying that it affected my Steam account

What's new:

Golden Globe nominations are in, and don't look now, but Netflix's The Crown racked up more than twenty - with four acting nods including actors for Star Wars' Daisy Ridley and Adam Driver, Baby Driver's Ansel Elgort, and Downton Abbey's Lily James. I took it as a good sign for James Bond, while Ridley and Driver both star in ambitious TV series, and remember the good old days when a single Oscar nod meant you were a guaranteed leading man in one the best films of any year. In my last post, I mulled over the career paths of Elliott Gould and Olivia Hussey, both directly comparable to James Bond, and in different ways relevant. Both of them won Golden Globes. (If you missed that post, I'm talking about Olivia Hussey and her performance in The Love Bug, and why it's really, really important that the character she plays is never (actually ALREADY) fatally poisoned and dies.) It's been a rough week for the Oscar race. There was once a time when James Bond would immediately be written into the lead, despite his later comparative middling numbers. How quickly the expectations shift, and as soon as Oscar votes are tallied, fans should remember Blofeld and Professor Dent, not those behind the camera or the screenwriting team. If your story idea isn't going to get a better result if you try to shoehorn a certain actor into it, better to let the story shine through... Anyway, I've been keeping my eyes peeled for animated short nominees, and Pixar is on a hot streak. I'm mostly interested in Cars 3, even though I'm not going to see it until the theatrical run ends. It's become pretty common for animated Oscar nominees to come into focus, years after the slate has hit theaters, with all that money spent on commercial prospects. If this time is any indication, we're going to be hearing some A-List names, and for Pixar? Really? I'm not even sure about Cars 3. Perhaps they should have saved the attention for Finding Dory. I'm more excited about the short contenders, and I'll dedicate a post to them soon (I promise, it's only a semi-secret Netflix surprise), since that's where

The Ministry of Introductions is a non-playable, interactive narrative that brings to life the vibrant universe of Venezia, the world of Beholder. It is also a story in which you play multiple characters! The Ministry of Introductions gives the player free reign to control and change the narrative, so that even if you only begin at one point in the story, you can always end it however you want. Live out the lives of your characters however you see fit! There are numerous possibilities to explore – and several interlocking storylines to choose from. All the characters in the game will react to each other and they will help you navigate the world of Venezia, but their actions aren't always what they seem. The Ministry of Introductions contains everything the player needs to tell their own story, through their own eyes, their own actions, and their own words. Features:

- Chose your characters from four different types: Frank, an idealist who wants to be good; Leonardo, a free-spirited dreamer and a trouble-maker; Lux, the opportunist who follows the actions of others; Tatiana, a force of nature whose nature has been forever altered.
- You can choose the ending of the story: Reversed, to start the story over again. Progressive, to see the true ending. Immediate, to know the truth from the very first sentence.
- Get immersed in a different world every day! Go explore it at your own pace – the missions that the characters tell each other are constantly changing! Meet other people, make new friends, and have your story shaped by your choices.
- Experience a story that has a twist. In The Ministry of Introductions, events unfold according to the choices that the player has made at critical moments. • Visit four different locations and meet many different characters: Krusvice – The first location – a mansion-like structure. (Repository) – The second location – the repository of secrets, where you will meet all of the characters that already have been introduced in the game. (Altruc) – The third location – the law courts of Venezia where you will hear stories of characters who have violated the law. (Venezia) – The fourth location – the government’s enormous ruling building. • All the places you visit are different

- Yea, you can.. and it's not that bad. You get to play for free and what's more there was an article about it on wikipedia the whole thing, so yea imagine that experience played by a modern game engine.
- But to heck with the gameplay.. how was the translation, were there any bugs or theming issues?
- Well yea kinda. You can't get out of the sea and nothing really happens in the video cutscenes but it's only a matter of time before you get out of the sea and it's time for the video game cutscenes where there were issues. I'm not talking about loading time. The video loading time was the same as the first game. So what did they do?
- They added a loading gate that loads the cutscene as soon as you have control and thus it hides the animation and shuffles the menu and the cutscenes until the main menu
- So yea for the time being you are stuck in the cycle and the end of the cycle is mostly concerned with shifting the game over to the loading gate for cutscenes and back again
- That's not that bad you can still role play the game, but if you want to play it on the highest difficulty then yea you will have to wait a lot!
