THE STATE. 52783. Court of Appeals of Georgia. Argued January 13, 1976. Decided February 7, 1976. *867 Thomas E. Spivey, Alfred T. Jones, for appellant. Dewey Hayes, District Attorney, for appellee. BELL, Chief Judge. In this prosecution for felony murder, defendant was convicted of murder, with punishment fixed at life imprisonment. The controlling issue is the sufficiency of the evidence. Defendant was indicted along with four others and one being tried separately. Defendant and the four others were charged with the murder of one Larry Lee. The victim, while armed with a gun, entered a house where he had been drinking with the three defendants and another individual. Thereupon he ordered the woman in the house to give him $25.00 and a vial of whiskey. The victim failed to produce the money and the liquor, so he drew his gun and shot the defendant Jerry Gregory. After Gregory's shot, the victim fled the house with the gun still in his hand. Another shot was fired at the fleeing victim and he fell dead. A witness who had attempted to aid the victim said he was hit in the hand by a second shot. Other defense witnesses swore to facts indicating that the shot from the house was fired from some distance. Defendant and the four others were indicted for this murder and all of them were convicted. All except defendant appealed and this court reversed the convictions on the ground that the State could not show that the defendant Jerry Gregory knew the victim was armed. As to the defendant Davis, however, there is no reversal. The evidence in his case was sufficient to support
