I am setting the values to these labels in cellForRowAtIndexPath method. The problem is that the UITableView scrolling is slow, so I want to make it faster by caching the values of the currency label and date label and update them when the row is scrolled. How can I get the values of the two labels when the view is scrolled? A: You would need to subclass UITableViewCell. Basically, you will need to store a reference of your custom cell, then override layoutSubviews() to update the labels at a given point in the UITableView scroll. Something like this would work, I think: - (void)layoutSubviews

{ [super layoutSubviews]; // Update
  labels label.text = @"Currency:
    $2.99"; } And in your cellForRowAtIndexPath method, you would initialize your label in the cell.
