What is Autorun? Ever seen the message "Will Windows copy this folder now?" asked after each action on your PC? Autorun is a feature in Windows which automatically runs some programs and opens up files in a certain folder. This can be a great feature for CD's to run an auto-demo of the CD or at the very least faster than starting the program from the CD. After inserting your favorite CD into your PC you can have a list of files on the CD, and access them by pressing a certain key. Windows even manages to copy the files to the hardisk so that you can open them with any other applications. But this feature can be a real nuisance to users, especially those, who have disabled auto-run. With AutoRunner this will not be a problem anymore! Enter AutoRunner! Once you have made your settings in AutoRunner, "autostart" will be disabled. This way you can carry on with other tasks while the CD is automatically loaded. You don't have to wait until Windows has finished copying the CD files, or choose the programs to run. All you have to do is run AutoRunner and you're done! What to expect from AutoRunner When you insert your CD, AutoRunner will attempt to load the file list on your CD. If it succeeds, it will extract the files from the CD and format the size of the CD. If it can't access the file list, it will attempt to load the file list from a place that is usually easy to access (like a folder on your harddisk) and then format the size of the CD. Installation: AutoRunner is a portable application. It's simply a.exe file that you'll find inside the AutoRunner folder that you have placed on your CD (depending on the CD author). Simply copy the AutoRunner folder
