Stasis Valley is a unique, narrative-driven platformer which tells the story of Adam, a young man dealing with the loss of his wife. He finds himself consumed by his own thoughts, and his mind takes him to a surreal world in his head. Through the course of his journey, he will face fears, come to terms with his loss, and discover that there may be more to the world in his head than meets the eye. Stasis Valley is developed using the Defiant engine, which features procedural and hand-drawn art styles. Stasis Valley is optimized for 720p and 1080p to maximize visual fidelity. The game was developed with the theme "Seeing through the eyes of those who can't see". The game features a support campaign (with the player's character as a narrator), which is designed to help fight social stigma and provide a safe environment for people to share their own stories and struggles with the meaning of seeing. Aquarium's Aqualife Aquarium's Aqualife is a much-needed asset for any modern survival game, offering vital benefits for the prospector who wants to brave the harsh wilderness to collect their precious water. By using this simple machine, the player is able to pump water from a nearby stream directly to their raft or camp, thus providing the essential element of fresh water needed for survival in the harsh environment. A pump at any stream will provide you with 5 bottles of water per minute, enough to carry you across many miles of wetlands in the world map. However, don't take this literally, as there's no way to keep infinite quantities of water in your lifeboat; just how to make the most of what you have will determine your success. Aquarium's Aqualife is an important addition to any game for survivors. Whether you're out foraging or trying to rebuild your community, you'll have a new ally. Features: Simple machine to provide the player with fresh water from streams. 5 bottle per minute, enough to carry the player across many miles of wetlands in the world map. Water pumps are only provided at streams, so the prospector must make sure to travel to locations where they can be located. Improving breast and ovarian cancers survival by improving diagnosis. About one-third of women with breast cancer have ovarian metastasis at the time of their initial diagnosis. It is hypothesized that ovarian metastasis is a late event in the natural history of the disease process and that breast cancers that are large at diagnosis will invade the ovaries early. We tested this hypothesis in the case of women with breast cancer; i.e., whether there is more variation in mortality from breast cancers that are large at diagnosis compared to those that are small. A cohort of 5,525 women with incident, operable breast cancer were identified from the linked Surveillance, Epidemiology and End Results (SEER)-Medicare database. The association between breast cancer size and subsequent survival were determined using the proportional hazards model, adjusting for confounding by age, stage at diagnosis, histology, ER, and BRCA1/2 status.
