Estimation of physical and chemical composition of chocolate from model compounds using simultaneous thermal analysis. In the present study, simultaneous thermal analysis (SFA) was applied as a matrix isolation technique for the determination of the concentration of cocoa polyphenolic compounds in chocolate. Polyphenolic compounds were isolated by the solid-liquid extraction technique from the solid fraction of Criollo and Valle del Belice and Criollo-Valle del Belice mixed chocolate. The solid extraction was accomplished by simple manual shaking of the powder in a solvent (dichloromethane). The solid residues were subjected to temperature programmed SFA, which led to the isolation of pure, non-fouling polymer samples. The concentration of the isolated compounds was subsequently determined by calibration against pure standard solutions. Three representative polyphenolic compounds were determined in the three types of cocoa with conventional and with SFA. The applicability of the method was demonstrated through the determination of phenolic constituents of the cocoa matrix by SFA as demonstrated by the extraction of chocolate. The analysis of the cocoa matrix by SFA proved that the average total polyphenolic content was 5.2 mg/100 g of sample and the concentration of epicatechin (catechin) was 1.16 mg/
