Starbase Soundtrack Vol. 1 is an album in the Star Wars: Original Soundtrack Series music from the blockbuster film Star Wars: Episode I - The Phantom Menace. It was released on October 1, 1999 by Varèse Sarabande. Featured are the score composed by George Lucas and performed by the London Metropolitan Orchestra, Royal Philharmonic Orchestra and London Voices, as well as the score composed by James Horner and performed by the Boston Pops Orchestra. With the exception of the Elliot Goldenthal-penned "Celebration" (which was originally written for a different film), the music is comprised exclusively of new material or new additions to existing scores. The release also includes several songs by Horner and John Williams. To date, Starbase was the most successful soundtrack to debut in the OST series since its creator Varèse Sarabande was resurrected by Lucasfilmmusic's Lucas Arts label in 1999. Critical reception to the score was mostly positive, citing the RPO as the standout, though some reviewers criticized the ballads and criticized Horner's score for being overly-similar to Williams' score for Jurassic Park. Other reviews preferred the score's song tracks over the instrumental ones. Varèse Sarabande continued releasing Star Wars albums in tandem with subsequent films. An entry in the MP3 era, Starbase contains the sixth best-selling soundtrack album on iTunes history as of 2020. Track listing All music composed by James Horner. All lyrics written by Michael Giacchino. "Main Title" - 0:48 "Int. Prosecutor's Office" - 4:52 "Enter Inquisitor" - 3:30 "Int.
