Sleepless nights and heavy duty sex can be two things that can actually become quite scary for some people. However, when you combine those two things, it becomes a higher level of concern. But, how do you know if you have a sleep disorder or just being tired? Well, there are a lot of signs that you could be having one of these conditions, but some of them can be obvious and some of them can be more subtle. Here are some of the more common indicators and how to tell if you might be having one of these two conditions. Night Sweats Night sweats can happen to anyone, especially when they get into a hot and humid environment. It's why we get those night sweats when we're sweating through a humid night with the windows shut. Sometimes though, even if you're sweating more because of all the stress and anxiety in your life, you could still end up with

This invention relates to the catalytic conversion of organic substances and, more particularly, to a process for producing ethanol by the catalytic conversion of a hydrocarbon-containing feedstock. The organic substances which may be subject to conversion in accordance with this invention include, for example, hydrocarbon-containing liquid and solid fuel mixtures, as well as hydrocarbons in either gaseous or liquid state. Useful feedstocks for conversion according to the processes of this invention are, for example, the residual fractions, the undistilled fractions, the by-products from the petroleum refining or chemical industries and the like. The feedstocks comprise for example, aliphatic hydrocarbons, such as n-paraffins, iso-paraffins, n-alkanes, and alkylated hydrocarbons as well as aromatic hydrocarbons, such as alkylbenzenes and naphthalenes. Thus, the feedstocks can be chosen from the various compounds which are made by the chemical, petrochemical and petroleum refining industries. The conversion of these hydrocarbons can be carried out in accordance with this invention with the use of various known solid catalysts and liquid catalysts. However, the liquid catalysts of this invention, as compared to the solid catalysts, are more particularly suitable in conversions wherein the feedstock is a distillate fraction of a petroleum or crude oil or a tar and the liquid catalysts are characterized by higher rates of conversion and lower equilibrium conversions. For many years, chemical synthesis procedures have been well known in the art for the preparation of ethanol by the reaction of a variety of feedstocks with water in the presence of catalysts. The following are illustrative of such known processes, the first being that of Abraham, U.S. Pat. No. 2,490,929 and the second being the so-called "Fischer-Tropsch" process, the latter of which is described in detail in an article by W. Rees and co-workers in Applied Homogeneous Catalysis, Ed. S. P. Teel, Interscience, N.Y. (1962). The method of Abraham involves the reaction of an ethylenic hydrocarbon and water in the presence of an organic silica gel catalyst. This reaction is
