The entire collection is very streamlined and chic. Simplicity is what I like about the design and I like most designs that feature color blocking. There are many different looks throughout the collection and I feel that the shoes are very well made. A true company shoemaker indeed!

Nickel (Ni) pollution is a worldwide problem due to its toxicity on plants. The aims of this study were to assess the bioenergetic response of rice roots to toxic

Ni (NiCl(2); 0.1-20 mM) and the subsequent transition of photosynthetic activity to sugar. The results show that Ni affected photosynthesis (measured as light-saturated CO_2 assimilation rate) from 2 to 10 mM Ni, and inhibition reached about 20 % after 6 h treatment. The phosphorylation potential ($\Delta G'i$) decreased significantly in rice roots under stress condition in both 0.1 and 5 mM Ni treatments after 6 h. The Mg-proton translocation system ($\Delta G'ii$) was down-regulated during the early stage (0-3 h) of Ni stress but up-regulated at the time of 12 h. Sugar content increased at first and then decreased under 0.1 mM Ni treatment, and at time of 12 h the sugar content increased to the control level under 5 mM Ni treatment. The result indicates that Ni stress causes dissipation of the photochemical energy and interruption of the sugar biosynthesis in the rice
