It will be released in the Soundtrack of the Series below. Oregon-based plywood maker Parowan Pest Control found itself in hot water with the state after a customer was bitten by a bee. The customer claimed that she found a hive on her property, which looked abandoned. But when she touched it, the bees stung her, causing her to seek medical treatment. After the incident, Parowan officials went to investigate the hive. When the company turned over the evidence, the state of Oregon determined the hive was owned by a professional exterminator, Parowan spokesman Paul Gregory said. The professional exterminator agreed to destroy the hive. The "bee incident" caught the attention of the Oregon Department of Agriculture. "Although we don't typically get into state issues, we generally get calls on invasions of beekeepers' property by non-professional beekeepers," said Ben Scheirman, communications manager for the department. "Based on the facts presented by the plywood supplier, we determined that the hive was owned by a registered beekeeper with a valid hive and some of the hives were in the process of being relocated to another area, so we did not cite the supplier for any violations." Gregory said the hive contained three hives. However, only one was in the process of being moved to a safer location. The incident may not be the first time the state has dealt with a professional beekeeper. Scheirman said they typically do not cite these cases because there was no criminal intent. They are not dealing with a personal invasion but rather a set of circumstances where there is no intent. "(The) Oregon Honey Producers' Honey Council gets about 80 to 90 such complaints a year," he said. The plywood company's next order of business is to have a representative reach out to the client to apologize and Take control of the Vengabus Supertruck VR, a heroic vehicle built to save citizens in an apocalyptic world. Vengabus VR is a horror truck that brings the game to life in VR; you'll need to use the VR controllers to crank the wheel and drive down the road. Your truck can be a brave do-gooder who can save helpless bystanders or a relentless killer who delivers a gruesome final blow. Can you make the right choice to survive? Using the Oculus Go Touch Controllers, players are placed in the driver's seat, steering the vehicle with the right trigger. The player can also use the analogue sticks to turn and maneuver the vehicle. Attached to the dashboard are two gloves that are attached to the controller; they will be used to interact with the passengers. 3 different perspectives are available First person – If the player looks through the windshield, they can see all the passengers in the vehicle and the driver. Third person – This viewpoint shows the driver's perspective. The player sees the dashboard and their hands in the VR controller, but everything else is out of view. The device is connected to the system using a VR Head Mounted Display (HMD) Wide angle – The game is a wide angle view so the player can look around the environment. This view is not affected by the head orientation of the player, so objects in the environment can appear distorted. Vengabus VR

who's currently in Sec. of State, told reporters. Some 43 people have been killed in Mizoram alone, a number that at least nine news agencies have chosen to quote. Forty-two, not 43? While with AP, that same day I once again quoted a news report in which 42 people had been killed by Mizo rebels in the state of Mizoram and the Meknaval, two Mizoram News Agency reports circulated it as 43 by quoting a Mizoram News agency report at the end of July which, apparently, had a single casualty to its credit. I told the Mizoram News Agency that it was a mistake in the NCR. I had received a correction from them, saying that seven were killed, but they had only five. I'm happy to see that their information has got better since then. I would be happy to see such corrections and improvements in information flow in all of India's media from around the world as well. What is it with our media that is so pro-TMC and anti-Opposition? Don't they understand that newsreels and broadcasts of such events need to be factual, inclusive and devoid of deliberate distortion? Thankfully, the Media Council of India is trying to address this issue. A very important meeting took place yesterday. On TV anchors, there has been an outpouring of soul-searching. TV channels need to be accountable. Do they have their own newsrooms? And how are they willing to work as a team, irrespective of political affiliations? Do they have the requisite journalistic standards? TV anchors, too, must live up to their responsibility. Now, let's meet the readers, the passionate, educated ones. This simply cannot be tolerated.[High-resolution CT in bronchiolar carcinoma]. High resolution CT was used in 15 patients with bronchiolar adenocarcinomas and bronchiolar squamous cell carcinomas to determine the accuracy of this technique in the diagnosis of bronchiolar malignancy. The analysis confirmed the high resolution visual appearance of the tumor, showing visible foci of calcification or necrosis on unenhanced scans. Infiltration of vessels by the tumor was seen by unenhanced scans and a corresponding H.R.CT appearance of the artery. A bronchiolar thickening accompanied by distortion of the bronchial wall was seen
