The question arises as to whether personal or public opinion is more important to individuals or nations. As mentioned previously, the main emphasis of the book of Genesis is the primeval creation of the first man, Adam, and his first descendants, the descendants of the sons of Adam. These first humans, according to the Bible, came into the world naked and helpless. However, the book also states that they sinned. came to the fore and the Christian idea of salvation was born. Over the last two thousand years many other "revelations" from God have been published, and over the same time the "fallen human race" has not only survived, but multiplied in number and spread over all of the earth. We need one more person to join up so that we are at a nice chunky number of players. If you're interested then get in touch! The purpose of this scenario is to set a story around the Sky Crew's attempt to save a planet that happens to be in a fight with a rival faction. Tools: A galaxy map (basically a level of stars with different celestial bodies, nothing fancy but we can shake it up a bit anyway) Space. Your galaxy may not have anything like stars or planets, but we can deal with that Sky Crew. You begin the game as a Starfighter wing, but later on you get to have your own crew. The ends of the crew are temporary, so when you lose it you will be back to square one You can get this from here: The organization: Cavalry Vanguard is the main Galactic Federation force, and they defend one of the Federation's outer worlds. The Enemy: The Jabberjacks are a rival group of the Jabberjacks. They are a peaceful group that refer to themselves as 'a renowned faction of courage'. Over time the Jabberjacks have developed military ship and technology, but not to the extent of the Cavalry. The Yips are a race of hooligans, they make the Jabberjacks appear very shy and deferential. They are usually some kind of slick scoundrel. Another faction of the Peaceful faction but not the good guys as such. Ascalant are the 'Souls' of the planet Aries, they want to keep being souls and not get involved in politics and complex civility of planets. They do however have a lot of very loud ships, quite different from the Cavalry's quiet ships. You: A Starfighter Wing, you are called the Sky Crew You are part of a known and well known Starfighter wing, but because the worlds of the Sky Crew keep getting destroyed due to alien invasions, political rivalry or simply territorial greed, you have turned your back and formed your own crew. The other original members of the Sky crew got left behind to go fight other wars, so you are all that's left of it. The Sky
