HYPERCHARGE is a 'living history' game, based on the historical 1900-1939 campaign of the Hong Kong-China International Water War and focusing on the first small-scale (and deadly) battles in the war. The 1939 confrontation would prove to be the largest war fought. For most of the war China was able to cover some 50,000

It is a dinosaur game, in which you work together with a sidekick and a cop-bot. Can you take down the evil dinosaurs? Gameplay Video: Steam user reviews: Can anyone please help me create the perfect VR game?
== Design
== Researching game ideas and presentation videos to inspire the aesthetics. We are focusing on a game which is a mix of arcades, Steampunk, High speed racing and Rally driving. With a touch of battle arenas and X. We are making a mix of a survival and racing game. Race across various futuristic worlds and take down all the evil dinosaurs, or are you up for the challenge? We want this game to be a "Just About anything" VR game, which is not centered on a certain theme, and include a variety of gameplay styles. We are aiming for a AAA game which we think will be easy to understand. The game is going to be on SteamVR and be in 3d and a first person vehicle. We are focusing on the vehicle aspect first, because the idea behind Arcades is that you put a coin in, and the player loses lives. Which is how it is in those old classic arcades, so we have decided to do the same concept here. Thanks for your advice and feedback!
== Sound
== We want this game to be loud, and have a fast pace, so we need a sound that comes across well in both situations. Also we want the sound to feel big, powerful, and keep us excited while playing our game. The language is English, but we plan to have multiple languages available for extra content. Thanks!
== Art & Animation
== I am a game designer so I can do this type of design work, but I have never animated before so I am looking for someone who has. I want the art to look clean and smooth and have a nice level of detail. Also the final character model needs to be designed and textured. I am unsure how you can do this for free, but, if you are interested in having this done for you for a price in the future, please feel free to send me a message. Thank you! In the game there are some puzzles and mini-games. The main goal of the game is to find a way out of the house, to find help on the battlefield. But we will describe only the most important and most interesting. The first task is to find the gate on the stairs - it is the main entrance to the house, most of the time, the player will have to go back and try to pass again. Such a gate can be found on the basement level, in the house in the middle of the basement. He was built to start playing such games, such a house as a player, but it was designed for animals. A gate is on the first level where the animals were, on their way out of the house. The front door leads only to the basement. The second floor is open in rooms, so the player can go up and down the level. A person leaving the house in the basement can pass the gate, so that player will go out the basement and continue the walk. If the player wants to continue to play the game, he can go up to the first floor, go through the house and then up to the second floor, where there are more rooms for him. One of these rooms is the room "greenhouse", where you are for instance, can find a ball of thread for the game.  Each room on the first floor has a special characteristic, a memory, which can be done for up to 5 points. The player in the course of the game, the mystery of this house, the game, will be what he will find, what he will find and solve. And it becomes a very important element in the game. How to play the game: Hints - it will help you to correctly play the game. * The player's actions on the first and second floor are not defined in advance. There are no predefined traps. A player has to solve the game manually.* The player should not skip any small moments, as it is not possible to restart them. * The player must avoid non-standard paths and pass the points as there are no traps. Killed: Game * B-button - you must press the corresponding square. * Finish game: * B-button - you must press the corresponding square. Show hints: Hints Hints Hints Hints Hints Hints Hints

The Sea of Stars () is a sea of many stars, but particularly of a star cluster, or "mackerel sky" (literally "mackerel sea"), in Aquarius, the constellation of the water-snake. It has been compared to a giant kaleidoscope and consists of up to several thousand stars. Some of these stars are very faint; they are so faint that it is impossible to identify their spectral types. Astronomers assume that such stars are red dwarfs. This is an artifact of the visible-light spectra of stars being incorrect below the red edge of the optical spectrum. Red dwarfs are very numerous and a population of these stars would fill up all spaces left to the sky by the more-distant fainter stars. Similarly, the stars of the Milky Way—our galaxy—are very numerous. A galaxy is a more massive and more coherent object than a star cluster and their visible light scattering in and out of the Milky Way plane is more strongly scattered than that of stars in our satellite galaxy, the Magellanic Clouds. Yet they appear as red stars on the colour-coded maps of the Milky Way by our position in the galaxy. The great galaxy clusters, those large systems of galaxies that project to the periphery of many modern maps of the sky, are also very massive and are reddened and scattered much more in the Maps of the Sky than the stars of our local group of galaxies of galaxies: the Local Group. Yet they show up the same way when they line up in a diffuse streak pointing towards the center of the galaxy group and the Milky Way. The stellar stream of ancient stars that underlies the gamma-ray burst remnant 002109+181708 is scattered in the same way. The stars of the Sea of Stars have resisted full optical identification of spectral types because the visible wavelengths of photons do not probe the full extent of the featureless blackbody spectrum but necessarily end at a maximum of a few hundred nm (nanometers) in their wave lengths. Blackbody spectra conform to Planck's law for radiation in quantized units of energy. Astronomers like to study stars because they provide evidence that a star is heated by the nuclear-fusion process just as a blackbody sphere is heated at a center and cooler regions are in contact with it (like the inside of a potato chip wrapped in paper). Stars' internal compositions (such as hydrogen, carbon, helium, and iron, etc.) can be inferred using
