In such systems, various types of vent closures are known in the art. One known vent closure arrangement involves the use of a turn-key valve. A turn-key type of vent closure has a valve which is positioned in the vent aperture, a seal which is secured to the wall of the tank, and a valve stem extending through the opening and cooperating with the seal. The valve stem is attached to a manually operated knob or handle which is operated to rotate the valve stem and change the position thereof to open or close the vent. Known turn-key vent closures are generally difficult to install and expensive to manufacture because of the materials and the complex assembly required. Also, the welds which are required to secure the various components are relatively expensive, and the assembly requires many assembly steps and requires the use of special hand tools. In an attempt to overcome the above problems, vent closures are known which employ a valve which is installed into an aperture in the wall of the tank and a plastic closure plug which is mounted in the vent aperture so as to be received on the valve. An example of such a structure is shown in U.S. Pat. No. 4,078,239, owned by the assignee of this application, wherein a plastic closure plug is secured to the end of a valve body by means of an O-ring and a pair of plastic prongs which are then inserted in a wall opening of a tank.
