For some reason I thought a noose might be a bit of a jerk move so I don't think that seems to make sense to me.Â .Q: Parcelable Serialization of a subclass object issue I have an class of type BaseField{"error", int} which implements the parcelable interface. In my app, I have a subclass of BaseField which takes as a paramater an object of type CustomField. My question is:

Can a BaseField object be serialized and sent to a CustomField object? Just wondering if there's a way to serialize an object of type CustomField with a base class of type BaseField? i.e. An object of type BaseField with paramter object of type CustomField There's currently a method in my BaseField class called "writeToParcel" which is causing issues as I understand it. Sorry if this is a basic question! A: It won't work out of the box. Parcelable only allows to transfer immutable objects. You need to implement Parcelable.Creator for CustomField: @Parcel class CustomField implements Parcelable { public static final Creator CREATOR = new Creator() { @Override public CustomField createFromParcel(Parcel source) { return new CustomField(source); } @Override public CustomField[] newArray(int size) { return new CustomField[size]; } }; private final int value; CustomField(Parcel source) { value = source.readInt(); } @Override c6a93da74d
