as described in the previous section, the office customization tool requires that you specify the source location, architecture, and the binary name for a language pack. however, if you're creating a new deployment, which you can do from a text editor, the office customization tool will always create a configuration file that uses the same source location and architecture as the existing installation. you can't use this feature, however, if you want to apply a different architecture and source location to the existing installation. when you create a new deployment, the office customization tool creates a configuration file that includes the name and version number of the office 365 core product. the name and version number of a language pack are derived from the name and version number of the office 365 core product and the language interface pack (lip) that you're installing. for more information about creating and deploying office 365 language packs, see deploying language packs. in previous versions of office, only the installer for office 365 apps included language packs. however, if your organization allows it, users can install office on a pc or mobile device directly from the office 365 portal. to enable this, you need to configure the office 365 portal to include language packs for each language that users can install. for more information, see configure languages for office 365 apps. note: this document refers to the most recent version of the office 2016 products. this version number is a placeholder for the latest version that's available. for the latest version, see the versioning chart for office 2016 pro plus.
