conversion tasks, however it still lacks the advertised feature to "redefine" a virtual machine to a newer version when the older version is still in the datastore.

for example, if you want to convert a linux vm image to a newer linux image, you can do so by using the v2v converter. the data in the target vm will be cloned and when the target vm is booted up, it will be updated to the newer image. if you want to convert a windows vm image to a newer windows image, you can also do so. the host machine will be converted from the old image to a newer one, then the target vm will be booted and updated to the newer image.
